Description

A contemporary new work and lifestyle environment that has been restored and redefined, with a new entrance, bright and airy spaces, along with tranquil landscaped external courtyards.

Historically used as a drill hall training facility for reserve army units, the building was originally home to the 1st AA Division Battalion in 1939.

Training in anti-aircraft defence, the troops would use the buildings to learn and practice. The original exposed brickwork still features in parts of the building, restored to honour its storied past.
