The current owners had always yearned for a property with stables just outside the back door and this equestrian property fitted their needs completely. The location was ideal too with an easy commute to Stansted by road or by rail to Gatwick. They made their mark by adding a beautiful timber framed garden room; opening out the dining room to the kitchen and over the years have maintained the home well, replacing windows, upgrading the wood burners and installing solar panels and batteries. These improvements have really had an impact on running costs, so when the sun shines the work is done! For horse lovers, there are ménage facilities, competition dressage and jumping available in the area.

Step Inside

If entering via the front door the generous entrance has stairs straight ahead, along with a practical utility room, perfect for muddy paws and boots and offering a toilet – ideal when gardening, riding, or just playing in the grounds. A wonderfully cosy living room is found to your left with feature Inglenook fireplace with wood burner. An open threshold leads to the expansive kitchen/breakfast room. The light space has the flexibility to enjoy a large breakfast table or perhaps add sofas too. The current owner waited years for a walk-in larder – and here it is, a real asset to any kitchen. The kitchen/breakfast room is semi open plan to the south facing dining room, again with Inglenook fireplace and wood burner and original beam – the character has been retained beautifully over the years of improvements, and the property feels so welcoming.

KEY FEATURES

The dining room has double doors to another reception room, currently used as a home office with a large pocket door to the west side of the garden. The kitchen also has a door to the tasteful oak framed garden room providing panoramic views of the gardens and stables, with doors either end, great for those sizzling summer days.

Versatile And Economic

The home has a wonderful flow, and the current owners have worked hard to create a feeling of light and space and still retain character and charm by using natural materials like wood and stone, in what was once two 1700's cottages. The reception room off the dining room is a great space – west facing and perfect for the afternoon and evening light. This would make a great summer snug, music room, or even a playroom with the access to the gardens. The dining room could be used as another sitting room, or teens lounge as the breakfast area is generous and could house meals for a crowd easily. The kitchen/breakfast layout is ideal for families – having breakfast whilst packed lunches are prepared or doing homework whilst dinner is cooked. For those who enjoy entertaining the space works equally well allowing guests to chat to the chef with a glass of wine or even relax in the garden room.

The first floor could operate as two separate areas with the option for a door across the hall at the far end of the landing to create a principal suite by using the smaller bedroom as a dressing room – for multi-generational families this home would work well. The running costs have been considered too with solar panels, batteries and feed in tariff when the sun shines and wood burners to heat the ground floor during the cooler months – with few doors to separate rooms the warm air circulates well and saves on central heating costs.

KEY FEATURES

Exploring Upstairs

The staircase leads to the first floor and the principal bedroom, a beautiful room with large windows, lots of light and space and a wonderful original beam running through. The family bathroom is just across the hall with skylight and again an airy feel ambience to it – the current owners added the bath in this large space. Two other double bedrooms have skylights, and one is currently used as a delightful dressing room but could easily be a bedroom again if required. The smaller bedroom is perfect for a nursery or a home office and has another bathroom next to it. The generous central landing hosts a seating area with window overlooking the frontage, ideal to escape to, with a good book or would equally suit a home office set up. For families and those who enjoy entertaining there is plenty of room for people to sleepover and to repurpose rooms allowing the house to adapt to your family's needs.

Step Outside

The property is approached by secure gating leading to a fabulous sized parking area offering plenty of space for friends and family to visit. The double garage with powered door and open cart lodge provide covered parking, a great asset in the heat of the summer or on a frosty morning and a log store sits next to the garage. Sixteen solar panels generating up to 4kw/hr, on the roof of the double garage, with 10kw batteries on the landing of the house help to keep running costs down. The formal wraparound garden has an abundance of mature shrubs, and the current owners planted trees including, wild cherry, walnut, silver birch, and ash. For green fingered enthusiasts the fruit cage and greenhouse offer a chance to sample the good life and grow your own and the current owners have enjoyed the fruits of their labour including raspberries, blueberries, French beans, and courgettes grown in the veggie beds with tomatoes and cucumber in the greenhouse. The paddocks plus a holding area and make this ideal for a pony or two. The stable yard is surrounded by a U-shape block, currently configured to stables, tack rooms, a feedstore and storage. There is so much space here to use, and the choice is yours as to what works best – the current owners use one stable to store all their outside furniture in winter!
