Location

Stowmarket is a market town in the county of Suffolk, c.98 miles to the north and east of London. The town has a population of circa 21,000 and has a growing industrial market incorporating both manufacturing and distribution uses. The town is situated directly to the south of the A14 at junction 50, and this trunk route connects the Port of Felixstowe to the East and East Midlands and beyond to the West. The A14 also provides good connectivity southwards towards London via the A12 (13.5 miles).

Tenure

The plots are held on Freehold titles, which will require splitting from the singular title upon completed plot sales.

Planning

The plots are located within the administrative boundaries of and lies in Mid Suffolk District Council within an Established Employment Area (EEA) on the Local Plan Proposals Map.

Method of Sale

The plots are being marketed either individually or combined by way of an open informal tender process and being offered for sale subject to vacant possession.

Unconditional offers are invited for the freehold interest.
