Part Of The City's History

Norwich has a rich manufacturing history and was at one time England's second largest city. Everything from mustard to chocolate, shoes to Christmas crackers was made right here. The city was also known for its textile industry, boosted by the arrival of the 'Strangers' from mainland Europe in the mid to late 1500s. By the early 18th century, Norwich shawls were becoming increasingly in demand, worn by the elite and even by royalty. One such business was owned by Henry Willets and based in what is now this home – originally a warehouse. Poor Henry tried to modernise his business by introducing power looms to save on labour. This was not well received by his workers who didn't want to lose their jobs. Thankfully the modern-day conversion of the warehouse has proved rather more successful!

KEY FEATURES

Fun And Family Friendly

This home offers a welcoming, family-friendly environment with generous, well-proportioned spaces and a charming blend of character features and modern comfort. Oak timbers, original flooring, wood beams and an open fire bring warmth and personality, while the open-plan layout creates an easy flow between the main ground-floor rooms. It's a house designed for spending time together - whether that's hosting gatherings, enjoying cosy evenings by the fire, or throwing open the bifold doors to make the most of the garden in warmer months. The sitting room and dining room can be opened up to form one large, flexible space, and with further bifold doors to the outside, the home lends itself effortlessly to both everyday family life and relaxed entertaining. Set within a small, gated courtyard, it offers a friendly, peaceful and secure setting right in the heart of the city.
