The village of Hambleton lies approximately 3 miles away from the historic market town of Poulton le Fylde, a charming place full of cobbled streets, unusual shops and ancient sights. Poulton has everything to suit all tastes and budgets. Tour the village and it's scenic surrounds on the three mile long historic trail, which sets off from The River Wyre Hotel, a 19th century pub close to Skippool Creek, where smuggling was once rife. From here you wander past salad growing fields and quaint cottages until you get to St Chad's church, the earliest records of which date back to 1094. For those wanting to travel further afield there is good access to both the coast and the Bowland hills, whilst the railway provides links to both Blackpool and Preston.
